ON-SITE REGISTRATION AVAILABLE AT ENVIRONMENTAL EDUCATION STATE SYMPOSIUM

This weekend, formal and informal environmental educators from around the region will gather at the 2014 Environmental Education State Symposium in Shreveport. Folks dedicated to passing on the important traditions of stewardship and conservation will meet, learn and share their experiences over two days of exciting activities and informative presentations. The event will take place February 21-22 at the Shreveport Convention Center.

Some HIGHLIGHTS!

- 20 concurrent sessions covering such diverse topics as chimpanzee behavior, composting, invasive species and hydrogen-powered vehicles
- Exhibit Hall, EE activity tables, & "Swap" table*
- Friday evening Playmakers of Baton Rouge will unveil their new environmental-themed play, Zoe's Watershed Adventure. The troupe will be performing the play at underserved schools around the state this spring on a tour sponsored by the Louisiana Environmental Education Commission. Be the first to sign up at the symposium!

The exhibitor hall features useful information and interesting displays.

Presenter demonstrates GLE-based environmental science lesson.

- Keynote address by ULM Toxicology Department Head, Dr. Kevin Baer, noted authority on multiple public safety issues, including: mercury in fish, insecticide and insect repellent toxicity, and water quality
- Motivational speaker retired Army General Russel Honoré will discuss leadership and its role in the environment.
